The Intel Developer Forum is primarily devoted to the various sessions and seminars designed to help system and software designers move their products forward, but the show is always accompanied by a nice little Technology Showcase that provides rich grounds for hobnobbing with various PC technology companies and gazing at simple displays of emerging tech. It doesn't have the bustling buzz of CES, or even Comdex, and it's far from the glitz of E3, but we'd be liars if we said there wasn't anything worth looking at. This year's Tech Showcase was no exception. What follows are a few photos taken from the show floor that are the more interesting displays. You won't be able to see who's viewed your regular Instagram photo or video posts, but it's pretty easy to figure out how to see who's viewed your photo or video stories. These instructions apply to Instagram for Android, iOS, and iPadOS. Tap your profile picture bubble at the top of your feed to view your story. Look at the lower left corner of your story. If any of your followers have already viewed it, you'll see one or multiple profile picture bubbles with a seen-by label beneath it. If you don't see this indicator yet, tap the X in the top right corner to close the story and wait a little bit longer for your followers to view it. After waiting, repeat steps three and four. Tap the profile picture bubbles with the Seen by # label to open the view tab. You'll see a list of all the people who've viewed your story, along with the total view count in the top left. Tap the X in the top right when you're done. Tap any viewer's profile picture or name to go directly to their profile. You can also tap the three dots beside their name to hide the story so that person can't view it again or alternatively the mail icon beside their name to send a direct message. Customize your story's viewing and sharing settings by tapping the gear icon in the top left corner of the story. From here, you can configure the following options: Hide Story From: Select people from your followers list to hide this story from them. Close Friends: Create a list of close friends if you only want to share this story with specific people. Allow Message Replies: Allow your followers or only followers you follow back to reply to your story or turn replies off altogether. Allow Sharing: Allow your followers to share photos and videos from your story as messages. Customize your story settings any time you want, even when you don't currently have any live stories, from your account settings. Open your profile, tap the menu icon in the top right, tap Settings, scroll down to Privacy and Security and select Story Controls. Check your notifications by tapping the heart icon in the bottom menu after the 24-hour story expiration period. Upon expiration, you should receive an automatic notification tell you how many people viewed your story. Tap that notification to open the story's view tab to see who viewed it. Screenshot Increase the chances of your story being viewed by more of your followers by keeping it around longer than the default 24-hour period. To do this, all you need to do is set your story as a Highlight. Tap to view your story and then tap the Highlight button in the bottom right. Although it will disappear from your followers' feeds after the 24-hour period, it will remain on your profile until you remove it. Consider setting your Instagram profile to private if you don't want people who don't follow you to view your stories. As long as your profile is public, anyone can tap your profile picture to view your stories. Whenever you view someone else's story, that person can see that you viewed it. There's no way to view other people's stories anonymously, so if you don't want someone to know that you're viewing their stories, your only options are to either view it through somebody else's account or not view it at all. Media Platforms Design Team I'm having a holiday party tonight and, as of yesterday, I hadn't prepared AT ALL. What's a girl to do? I phoned socializing and events expert Allana Baroni (her website is getsocial.com) for some fast and fabulous (and cheap!) ideas. Here are her best tips: Make a fun first impression with a wreath (square boxwood wreaths are hip and unexpected). Place a quirky photo in the center. (Allana once used a photo of her family next to polar bears at the zoo.) To "up the wow-factor without a lot of hassle," Allana suggests purchasing some dramatic wallpaper or wrapping paper—say, bright red. Place blue painter's tape along the area you'd like the paper to cover, then affix the paper to it with double-sided tape. After the party, you can remove the paper without damaging your walls. Make an interactive piece of art by hanging Frames wallpaper in the manner described above. On the paper—preprinted with picture frames—you can affix Polaroid photos and let guests scrawl messages. You can buy it here, but I cheated and make my own with a roll of plain white paper. Rather than spending a ton on flower arrangements, you can buy seasonal fruit and vegetables in bulk and use them as centerpiece. I loaded up on lemons and limes, although I imagine they'll be chopped up for cocktails pretty quickly once the party starts. Fill jars of varying heights with water and float one flower in each. A dozen cheap red stems goes a long way with this impressive-looking trick. Bring the outside in. Create one of those giant, hotel-style arrangements by using clippings from your yard. (Since I don't have a yard, I picked up some evergreen branches at a florist in my neighborhood for $5.) Make the food interactive to get guests involved in the party. Allana suggests a panini station, and I love setting up fondue. One last suggestion: Allana (who's also a spokesperson for Claritin) keeps guests from rooting through her medicine cabinet by placing a small basket with a "survival kit" in her bathroom. Stock it with hand lotion, an OTC painkiller and a nondrowsy allergy medication. "The most gracious thing a host can do is realize that some people suffer from allergies," she says. "The key is to have something nondrowsy, so guests can have a good time and get home safely." —Jennifer Conrad What's your favorite fast-and-fabulous decoration? Help me out in Comments.
